

Live in person online presentation:
Supervisory Skills Training: How to Just Say “No”
Sworn to Honor Management
January 9, 2025 from 1:00pm-4:00pm EST

Class participants learn powerful and enforceable ways to say “No” for the right reasons, to the right persons, and in the right way, for example:

- No, you can't take a day off simply because you want it.
- No, just like bullets, sick days cannot be used just because you have them.
- No, you haven't earned the right to your request.

When “No” is the answer to an unreasonable, unwarranted, or untimely request, just saying “No”:

- Creates clear, consistent, and respected boundaries
- Maintains authenticity and trust
- Reduces the chance of miscommunication
- Reduces performance inefficiencies

Manage Performance not Performers

Participants are urged to engage actively, participate in meaningful discussions, provide immediate feedback, and collaborate effectively. Class size is limited to allow time for demonstrations, questions and answers. Please register early with an E-mail address that will accept attached pre-class learning materials.

Bring to webinar: Laptop or desk to computer equipped with a microphone and camera-capable of connecting to the internet and the pre-sent class outline training package.
